Dear Contribute,

RE: ARTHRITIS & THE IMPACT OF THE PANDEMIC.

Thank you for your recent correspondence in respect of the impact of the Coronavirus pandemic on people suffering with arthritis; your comments upon which I have read with great interest and compassion. Indeed, I commend Versus Arthritis for their work to support people suffering with arthritis and to raise awareness of the condition.

I am so grateful to everyone who has worked so hard to stay at home throughout the pandemic: those efforts have undoubtedly saved lives and enabled our NHS to provide urgent treatment for conditions like cancer and significant levels of emergency care. However, I understand that 4.7 million people in England are now waiting for care, with around 380,000 of those having been waiting for more than a year, in addition to people who have not contacted their GP when, in ordinary times, they would have reached out for help. I agree that we must act urgently to tackle this problem.

As a result, I welcome that the Government is already working with the NHS to accelerate service recovery: in March 2021, an additional £7 billion of funding was announced for healthcare services, including £1 billion to target backlogs in elective services. As part of the commitment to the recovery of non-urgent services and to address elective backlogs, £325 million has been provided for new investment in diagnostics equipment to improve clinical outcomes.

I know that staff throughout the NHS are working extremely hard to tackle the backlog: in January and February 2021, NHS staff completed almost two million operations and other elective care while also providing treatment to 140,000 COVID-19 patients in England. However, I agree that there is more work to be done in this area over the coming months and I would be happy to work with our local healthcare organisations to encourage people to seek the care that they need, and to ensure that patients experiencing delays in treatment, including people waiting for joint replacements, have all the support that they need in the meantime.

Once again, thank you for having taken the time to contact me and if I can ever be of any further assistance to you, then please do not hesitate to contact me again.

With best wishes,
